He does not however, sary to the German foreign office, will not arrive in Berlin for several days, and it is not expected that the German reply surprised if the German reply should reach Washington before June 25.

Whether the German foreign office will k to delay its reply beyond that point s, of course, problematical. While the President's note contains no hint of threat the German foreign office will learn from Dr. Gerhard how keen the temper of the American people is and how deeply and pointedly resentful they would be of any further procrastination or evasiveness. If Germany really desires to maintain its peaceful relations with this country, its realization of the full measure of support which President Wilson commands, and a careful reading of his communication will point the way. If Germany does not care to continu riendly relations, it has but to procrastinate and evade to receive a communicaultimatum, the alternative to the acceptwhich would be the severance of

It is now no secret that the administra-tion is counting largely upon the fact of Mr. Bryan's resignation to impress this realization on the minds of the Germans press still under the impression that, be ing pro-English, Bryan resigned because the note to Germany was not strong enough to sult him. Quoting Bible and Bowing to Prince of Peace, He Asks American Public to Sit in Judgment Upon His Desertion.

William Jennings Bryan, having deserted his leader when he believed that desertion would accomplish the most damage, commenced yesterday his campaign of publicity to undermine President Wilson's support. In a statement issued simultaneously with the text of the President's note Germany, Mr. Bryan handed out the following:

To the American People:

You now have before you the text of the note to Germany—the note to Germany—the note to Germany—the note to Germany—the note to the property of the note to Germany—the note to the note which it would have been my official duty to sign had I remained Secretary of State. I ask you to sit in judgment upon my decision to resign rather than to share responsibility for it. I am sure you will credit me with honorable motives, but that is shown, without an inevitable violation of not atone for a mistake at such a many sacred principles of justice and time, on such a subject and under such circumstances. But the real issue is not between per-sons, it is between systems, and I rely for vindication wholly upon the strength of the position taken.

Among the influences which governments employ in dealing with each other there are two which are pre-eminent and antagonistic-force and persuasion. Force speaks with firmness and acts through the ultimatum; persuasion employs argu-ment, courts investigation and depends upon negotiation. Force represents the old system—the system that must pass away; persuasion represents the new system—the system that has been growing, all too slowly, it is true, but growing for nineteen hundred years. In the old system war is the chief corner stonewar which at its best is little better than war nt its worst. The new system con- toric friendship and by a recollection of templates a universal brotherhood estab-lished through the uplifting power of example.

Christian Nations at War.

Never before have the frightful folice of this fatal system been so clearly revealed as now. The most civilized and enlightened—aye, the most Christian, of the nations of Europe are grappling with each other as if in a death struggle. They are sacrificing the best and bravest of their sons on the battle field; they are converting their gardens into cemeterles and their homes into houses of mourning; they are taxing the wealth of today and laying a burden of debt on the toil of the future; they have filled the air with thunderbolts more deadly than those of Jove, and they have multiplied the perils of the deep. Adding fresh fuel to the of the deep. Adding fresh fuel to the flame of hate, they have daily devised new horrors, until one side is endeavor ing to drown noncombatant men, women and children at sea, while the other side seeks to starve noncombatant men, won en and children on land.
